

Dartmouth Learning Network Advocates

Most funding for literacy, not only for The Dartmouth Learning Network, but also across the province and country comes from government sources. Unfortunately literacy is often a silent issue because low literate individuals typically try to hide their lack of skills and many don't vote. There is always a need to keep literacy issues in the minds of those who make decisions about adult education. You can contact your legislators directly or partner with the Dartmouth Learning Network to let your elected officials know how you feel about the need for literacy programs.